HE WAS THE OLDEST MAN BORN IN STATE OF INDIANA.

A Fall Two Weeks Ago Hastened His End-Was the Father of Mrs.

Thomas Pursel, father of Mrs. Norman S Byram, died at the latter's residence last night, at the age of ninety-five. He was apparently hale and hearty until two weeks ago, when he fell and broke his hip, and owing to his advanced age he failed to survive the shock. For twenty-nine years Mr. Pursel had made his home in this city with his daughter. The surviving children are of Tucson, A. T. The funeral arrangements will be announced later. Thomas Pursel was before his death probably the oldest man that was born in Indiana. While Indiana was still a Territory his parents left Pennsylvania, and, following the windings of the Ohio, then the great thoroughfare of the emigrants, came at last to what is now known as Dearborn county. The country was then a wilderness, the nearest settlement miles away and the only means of travel by horseback through a pathless forest. Thomas the ninety-five years of his life was a constant resident of Indiana.

His earliest recollections dated back to of personal property. the rude log cabin built by his father. Not a nail was used in the entire building, and only such articles as could be made by the settler himself were used to furnish the home established in the wilderness. Little could be brought in the wagon that carried the family-a few dishes, bedding, clothing and cooking utensils and provisions enough to last until the ground could be made to yield more. The cooking was Ethel, of Bloomington, are visiting Mr. and | done at the open fireplace and the beds were made by driving pegs in the walls to support boards. Upon these the straw-filled "ticking" was laid and the bed, softened, perhaps, by a feather bed from the old home, was ready for occupancy.

BLOCKHOUSE ON THE FARM. Indians were frequent visitors at the home of the Pursels, and on the farm a Steele, left yesterday for an extended trip | blockhouse was erected, to be used in case of an uprising, and well-laid plans were constantly rehearsed, so that the settlers might be ready at an instant's notice to repel the attacks of any roving bands bent on pillage and massacre.

> Until he was seventeen years of age Thomas Pursel lived with his parents. In 1824 he entered Miami University, and at his death was the only surviving member of that class. Symms Majors, who attained prominence in the State, was his roomclassmates. Prof. William H. McGuffy. author of McGuffy's text-books, was the instructor in Latin, Greek and Hebrew. Upon his withdrawal from the university young Pursel was engaged in New Orleans trade, rafting farm produce down the Ohio and Mississippi to the Southern city. He remembers the consternation caused by the bankrupt condition of the State immediately after the building of the Whitewater canal. He and his family were sufferers from the frequent and disastrous floods of the early days that swelled the Ohio river into a torrent and laid waste > the surrounding country. His father, William Pursel, and his uncle, Robert Brackenridge, built the first frame house in Harrison, situated near the Indiana-Ohio line. It was built for a tavern, and its first proprietor was the father of David Wallace, the sixth Governor of Indiana and the grandfather of Gen. Lew Wallace. Mr. Pursel remembered that Mr. Wallace was fond of playing ball-"fives" was called—inrowing the ball against the house and catching it on the rebound, certainly a play that his grandson never indulged in after he had reached the years

A FREQUENT VISITOR. William Henry Harrison was a frequent visitor at Harrison, where there also lived the Eads family, from which came the famous engineer of the St. Louis bridge and the Mississippi jetties; William Tyner, Gen. In 1832 Mr. Pursel opened a dry goods store at Fairfield, and kept the postoffice Mrs. E. C. Atkins and Miss Atkins will in the back of the store. In 1838 he was elected sheriff of the county and moved to Brookville. He bought a home of ex-Governor James B. Ray, who came from Indianapolis on horseball to execute the

About this time Thomas Pursel went to Baltimore by stage in order to reach Washington, D. C., for the purpose of bidding on the carrying of the mails between !ndianapolis and Cincinnati. His bid of $1,999 defeated that of Abner McCarty by $1, and the contract was awarded Mr. Pursel. Forty horses were used to convey the mail. and a coach was started in both directions each morning, reaching the destinations at

When the outbreak of the civil war came Mr. Pursel was a resident of Daviess county. He was fifty-six years of age and too old to serve, but before his death talked of the terror and excitement occasioned by the threatened raid of Morgan and his men. The farmers hid their horses, he said, and all their valuables and prepared to defend their homes as best and the several rooms were hung with Chi- | they might from the depredations of the Southern guerrilla and his band.

Mr. Pursel came to Indianapolis in 1874, since which time he had been a resident cakes in the Chinese colors of yellow and of the city. Despite his years he preserved his memory and all his faculties were active. On pleasant days he thought nothing of a walk of several blocks and smoked regularly after each meal. He was at the head of four generations, had six children living, eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, the eldest of whom is nineteen years of age.

He says further that the boards do not anticipate much of an argument with the railroad companies this year. He was informed yesterday by Deputy Auditor Martin that but two applications for a hearing have been filed by railroads thus far. Mr. Martin thinks the meetings which he and Mr. Wingate held with the township assessors early this year have been productive of good results. These meetings had a tendency to interest the assessors in their work and to make their work more thorough. ### JOSEPH SUTTON HONORED

FIRST BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER FOR FIFTY YEARS.

A Reception for Him at the Church and the Presentation of $50 in Gold.

To Deacon Joseph Sutton, who for fifty years has been a leading member of the First Baptist Church, and who has taught a Sunday school class during the half century, the older members of the congregation extended a pleasant reception last night in the Sunday-school room of the church. At the close of the meeting Deacon Sutton was presented with $50 in gold by the members of his class.

Deacon Sutton's connection with the church and the Sunday school has covered In his reminiscent talk last night he recalled the principal events marking the growth of the church and spoke of the old half century ago the First Baptist Church was on South Meridian street. After the building burned the congregation met in

Mrs. H. A. Noe, who was one of those that told Deacon Sutton how much his labors for the church have been appreciated, remarked that it was a coincidence that just forty-one years ago last night. She became at once a teacher in the Sunday school and an active church worker. "In those days," she said, "it was literally a day in the Lord's house. We went to church took our lunch with us. After the morncontract between them and the plaintiff has | Sunday school would be called, and that lasted usually all afternoon. Then we would hurry back home, eat a little dinner and get to church again in time for the evening service. More than that, nobody complained or grumbled as they do now.' Charge Against Them Is Engaging in Policy Playing.

Detectives Asch and Holtz yesterday arrested Steven Tewell, who said his home was in Muncle, and Harry Sanders, of 543 East Washington street, on a charge of engaging in policy games. The men were caught as they came out of Sanders's barber shop on East Washington street. Sanders's pockets were filled with little slips of paper which told of drawings in some policy game. It was said that the Sanders barber shop had long been suspected as a place where policy was being played.

Last night the same detectives arrested Robert Duncan on the charge of engaging in the policy business. He is understood to be engaged with Tewell and Sanders.

Incorporation of Norwood.

Pearson Mendenhall, trustee of Center township, yesterday presented to the County Commissioners his ideas in regard to the incorporation of the town of Norwood, telling them that to incorporate the town would deprive the township of money met yesterday with Miss Ada New, state | that should be applied on outstanding notes. The commissioners informed Mr. Mendenhall that it was not optional with district superintendent, to discuss plans for them as to whether the town is incorthe rally of the Junior and Intermediate porated. It requires a petition of one-
